This material is for informational purposes for the Building Supply Industry Association (BSIA) and is not intended to be exhaustive nor should any discussions or opinions be construed as legal advice.

Contact your own insurance broker/advisor for insurance advice, tax professional for tax advice, or legal counsel for legal advice regarding your particular situation. JT does not accept any responsibility for the content of the information provided or for consequences of any actions taken on the basis of the information provided.

This explanation of the reporting provisions of your policy has been provided in order to assist the BSIA in understanding and complying with the policy's requirements.

In the event of a question or disagreement with your insurer concerning interpretation of the policy's reporting requirements as applied to the reporting of a specific claim, loss, occurrence, incident, offence, or lawsuit, the actual policy wording, which is the contract between you and the insurer, and not JT's explanation of that language, will be controlling.

J.T Insurance Services (Canada), Inc., as an insurance representative, does not provide legal advice, and this explanation should not be relied upon as legal interpretation of the policy provisions.
